Guide Xtreme Download App – GApps MRC has done a good job of keeping the Xperia Z2 updates up to date with Android 4.4.4. When the update was announced, I was eager to get my hands on it and see if it would bring any new features or tweaks to the Xperia Z2. After I installed it, I was super happy to have the latest and greatest on my flagship. It has been confirmed by GApps team that GApps downloader is able to retrieve Gapps data files for free. Gapps for your other devices in the normal fashion, most likely by entering in the details for your device on the Gapps page. In order to apply an update or reboot into a new firmware, GApps must be installed. The GApps installer is a standalone program that will allow you to download and install applications that are compatible with Android 4.4.4 directly on your phone. If you don't know the name of your device's IMEI, then you can get it from your phone's display. Unfortunately, it is not possible to install the GApps zip file directly on the phone using this method. The GApps installer for Android can be downloaded from the page " Gapps release " and it must be installed in the /system/app folder. In this video, I'm going to walk you through the process of installing GApps on a Nexus 7 tablet for the first time, along with a demonstration of how the GApps installer works. If you have a Gapps zip file you wish to install on your phone, please use the normal method for downloading and installing applications. Install GApps zip file Step 1. Make sure the GApps zip file you downloaded is valid and clean. You can download a copy of the file through the links below. How To GApps On Android? Step 2. The downloaded GApps zip file has a new file named " Install-GApps.bat " that contains the program for you to install. Install-GApps.bat looks like this: The command needed to install a GApps zip file is: Note that for some reason it needs a restart after the file is installed, otherwise it will not work. I have no idea why this is. Step 3. Run the command and follow the prompts. It will take a couple of minutes for the install process to complete. Step 4.
